

To: Crystal Rodwell

From: Dustin Rodriguez

Date: May 2nd 2023

RE: Lab Report Analysis Self Reflection

For the Lab Report Analysis first draft I didn't compare the organization of the labs but rather the information provided in the Labs. While writing the comparisons they were not in-depth enough to understand how each Lab was performed and what their goal for the lab was. This assignment was slightly more personal as I was able to look for personal interests and then analyze them.

The first improvement of the final Lab Report Analysis was adding the title page. From what I improved on with the lab report analysis was analyzing each section in each lab report. After analyzing the individual pieces like the abstract, introduction, procedure and the final results I was able to understand the labs better and the objectives of the labs were much clearer. Reading the organization allowed me to also understand how the labs were completed, possibly recreate the experiments to see if I could come with the same results that the experiments had. The links to labs were attached at the bottom as the references so the readers can examine the Labs on their own.

This assignment wasn't difficult but just tedious. While I was reading something I did enjoy, breaking it apart to analyze the structure did not allow me to actually see how the procedure would meet the end results. It dragged on and creativity still felt as if it was lacking and I was stunted by following a routine.